Hildreth Meière, Self Portrait, oil on canvas, 1943

Hildreth Meière (1892–1961) was a prolific muralist whose commissioned works adorn the walls and ceilings of public buildings from New York to California. Born in New York, Meière first studied art in Florence, Italy, where she discovered the frescoes and mosaics that were to inform her craft. Continuing her studies in New York, San Francisco, and Chicago, she traveled to Europe during the summers where she was introduced to les arts decoratifs, later to be known as Art Deco, of which she became an early American exponent.

Speaker Anna Kupik is a board member of the International Hildreth Meière Association where she is committed to preserving, educating, and promoting Hildreth's legacy.
